AN argument for the XVth amendment used in the North is that it spikes that Southern gun, which charges that Northern States refuse for themselves what they would enforce on the South. Another suggestion is that it will make an end of controversy on the subject. The 250 fact of a million and a half against 100 five staring it in the face makes no And General Commission Merchants. difference. It has declared the horse sticks to it. Stimulated to production as we are by thirty cents per pound for cotton, the Tribune estimates the crop of 1869 at three millions, and predicts five within ten years, all without reference to the effects of Chinese immigration. If the Tribune any basis for such a calculation, it is in the rapid filling up of the country with immigrants, stimulated by the present enormous prices of the staple. Certainly without that, and with nothing but negro labor to rely on, we not only should not reach ten millions, but we never should three. If cotton age old prices-nine cents gold, or say twelve cents greenbacks, supposed to be the equivalent—we should not make, in 1869, more than one million ales of cotton. The reason we are making so large a crop as we do is, that white labor, induced by the price, is so largely engaged in it. And even with all this stimulus, three millions is an extravagant estimate to be made at the commencement of the picking eason. It will certainly be very remarkable if, with half labor and a good season, we gather more than half full crop. The result depends more on the gathering than on the producblacks as pickers; and we doubt whether, with their labor added to that of the molety of blacks now in the cotton fields, it will be possible to harvest more than two and a half millions. We shall be very fortunate if we do that. The whole crop, more or less, however, the Tribune will still persist in setting down to the credit of free as against slave labor. And if Cotton Factor the country should fill up with Chinese, and consequently reach its ten millions of bales, the Tribune will coninue exultingly to say " told you so; told you so! See the vast pecuniary On our fourth page we publish this advantages of freed labor!" The South will be enriched and aggrandised by all causes, and the Tribune Ed. J. Taylor, Of DeSoto Co., Miss.
